Cordolium

by AL ORSOM

[1. Verse]

In the hush of midnight's shadow,
Where memories softly fall,
I hear the echo of your laughter
In empty, gilded halls
Heartfelt grief, a silent river,
Winding through my soul's terrain —
Every note a faded whisper,
Every dream a gentle pain

[Pre-Chorus]

And the stars, they weep above me,
Silver tears upon the sea,
Carrying the weight of longing
Where your love used to be

[Chorus]

Cordolium—my heart's lament,
A symphony of sorrow sent
Across the night, where hope is thin,
I reach for you, but can't begin
To mend the ache, the loss, the cost —
Cordolium, for what I've lost

[2. Verse]

In the glow of morning's promise,
I search for solace in the light,
But profound sorrow lingers softly,
Turning day to endless night

[Pre-Chorus]

Heartache paints the world in color
Only broken hearts can see—
A tapestry of longing
Woven deep inside of me

[Bridge]

Let the strings cry out my yearning,
Let the brass declare my pain,
Let the drums recall the thunder
Of a love I can't regain

[Chorus]

Cordolium—my heart's lament,
A symphony of sorrow sent
Across the night, where hope is thin,
I reach for you, but can't begin
To mend the ache, the loss, the cost —
Cordolium, for what I've lost
